BECAME A DISGRACE TO KIN

Scotch Colliers Reverted to Wild State When Imported into Patagonia and Argentina.

Some years ago the shepherds of Patagonia and Argentina imported a large number of Scotch colliers into those countries to help herd the sheep. But imagination seemed to spoil the companionable, affectionate and intelligent dog from the Highlands. In two or three years his entire nature changed and he became independent, snappish, sly and disobedient. Bad treatment may have had something to do with it, but by two and threes the colliers rapidly deserted the flocks and took to the woods, where they soon became wild dogs.

They have increased so fast and become so fierce in both countries that not only do they carry off small animals and fowls, but have grown so bold that they do not hesitate to attack travelers even in broad daylight. They travel in packs, and when hunted scatter to hiding places in the rocks. The Patagonian and Argentine governments have offered bounties for every wild dog's brush, and while the war of extermination may deplete both national treasuries the only effect it has had on the colliers has been to make them keep to cover during the day. Every shepherd goes armed and keeps a constant lookout, but shooting has not decreased their numbers, and poison has been tried without success, as they are too shrewd to eat anything set for them.

Magic of the Rainbow.

The rainbow shimmering high in the heavens is more than a mere arch of glowing colors. It is a royal ambassador from the kingdom of nature, a herald bearing a message of vast importance to mankind. Written upon its brilliantly-hued, shining archway is a truth that man has finally appreciated after the countless ages that have passed since the first rainbow glorified the heavens. And this truth is what? Nothing less than the revelation of the component elements that constitute the sun and stars and the dim-shining nebulae lost in the farthest hiding places of the universe. By means of this truth, written large upon the raindrops, we know more about the composition of the sun, 93,000,000 miles from the earth, than we do about the world on which we dwell.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

No Need to Worry.

A lovely woman who lives on Roxford road, East Cleveland, is the proud mother of two boys. Reginald is six years old, while Ronald is not yet two. Both children are active and inquisitive, so it has become necessary to employ a young girl to watch them.

Mamma is subject to headaches, and mamma has discovered the sort of proprietary pills that will relieve them. One mustn't take more than one per hour. And the other afternoon mamma had a headache, took a pill and went to rest. After a while she got up to repeat the dose—and found the pill box empty. She summoned the maid.

"Frida!" she cried. "Did Reginald swallow all those pills. Answer me!"

"No'm," answered Frida, with a smile. "Don't be scared none. He's a chenerous kid—he gafe half of 'em to der baby!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Centennial Towns.

There will be six "centennial towns" in Maine this year. Six towns were incorporated by the legislature of 1812, one of which has since grown to be a city. They are the city of Brewer on the Penobscot river, Phillips far up in Franklin county, Bangs on the Kennebec river, Troy in Waldo county, and Foxcroft and Sebasticus in Piscataquis county towns. Most of these places will have a centennial celebration. Some have been planning for some time and local historians have been gathering material for the historical address. The birthdays come in February but following the usual customs will be held in the summer and in connection with something like an old home week, when the sons and daughters of the town will gather from all parts of the country. There will be family and class reunions, exercises in the town hall, a historical parade, a big dinner, always a "centennial ball" and music by the village band.—Waterville Sentinel.

The Cabman and the Bishop.

It is not often that a cabman has any chance of influencing ecclesiastical appointments, but Dr. Browne points to such an occasion. When he was Bishop of Stepney he was once dismissing a hansom at Amen Court when the driver said: "That's an uncommon nice young man you've sent to take charge of the church in—square. If ever you have the chance to put him in a bigger job he'll do well." A little later the Bishop did find and did use an opportunity to put the clergyman into a better job and the cabman's words were justified, for he did it very well indeed. Moreover, Dr. Browne has been known to remark, "There is no doubt what the cabman said did really influence me."—London Tit-Bits.
